Inside
JENNIFER GARNER
ED HELMS
LILY COLLINS
TAYLOR KITSCH
EMILY BLUNT

THE HUNGER GAMES’ JENNIFER LAWRENCE RISES TO THE CHALLENGE

OUR EIGHT FAVOURITE LOOKS FROM SPRING’S RUNWAYS, Page 42!
i AM THE WORLD’S SMALLEST 4 SEATER.
i HAVE UNPARALLELED PARKING.
i AM PACKING 11 AIRBAGS.
i TURN ON A 3.9m DIME.
i SIP 5.5L/100KM (CITY).*
i AM GOING TO BE BIG.
SAVE THE BEST PIECE FOR LAST.

HELLO MY NAME IS

AMERICAN REUNION

APRIL 6
COVER STORY

38 GAME CHANGER
She may only be 21, but Jennifer Lawrence knows all about pressure. Nominated for an Oscar before she was old enough to drink, she’s now the face of the bestselling book-turned-film The Hunger Games. Here she talks about the pressure of playing rebel Katniss Everdeen.

BY INGRID RANDOJA

REGULARS

6 EDITOR’S NOTE
8 SNAPS
10 IN BRIEF
14 SPOTLIGHT
16 ALL DRESSED UP
18 IN THEATRES
46 CASTING CALL
48 RETURN ENGAGEMENT
49 AT HOME
50 FINALLY...

FEATURES

22 TRIP TO MARS
Taylor Kitsch can’t wait for his big-budget Martian adventure pic John Carter to come out; the movie could land him on Hollywood’s A-list.

BY MARNI WEISZ

26 SNOW JOB
We visit the Montreal set of Mirror Mirror to talk to Lily Collins about stepping into Snow White’s pretty shoes.

BY INGRID RANDOJA

30 HELMS DEEP
Ed Helms doesn’t think he’s a star, but roles in Dr. Seuss’ The Lorax and the comedy Jeff Who Lives at Home may prove him wrong.

BY BOB STRAUSS

34 BUTTER NUT
Jennifer Garner tells us about learning to carve butter (and it ain’t easy) for the upcoming Iowa-set comedy Butter.

BY INGRID RANDOJA

37 GONE FISHIN’
Salmon Fishing in the Yemen star Emily Blunt on working with Ewan McGregor, drinking in Morocco and believing in the impossible.

BY MATHIEU CHANTELOIS
Ensure the affected area is cleansed.
Apply a thin coat of COLDSORE-FX® and allow it to absorb before applying makeup.
Using a fine-tipped makeup brush, gently feather a creamy concealer over and around the area.
With a small brush, set concealer with a light dusting of powder.
Disinfect brushes immediately so that you do not spread the cold sore.
Repeat several times a day.

Beauty expert Paul Venoit’s six steps to conceal while you heal

Beauty expert and celebrity makeup artist Paul Venoit

coldsore-fx.ca

To be sure this product is right for you, always read and follow the label.

MANUFACTURER’S COUPON EXPIRES 04/15/12
Limit one per customer. Offer expires April 15, 2012.
To the Dealer: Upon receipt of this coupon toward the purchase of the specified product, Afexa Life Sciences will reimburse you the face value of the coupon plus regular handling. Application for redemption on any other basis may constitute fraud and will, at our option, void coupon presented. A reduction in any applicable taxes payable is included in the coupon face value. Applications for reimbursement accepted from principals only. Mail to: Afexa Life Sciences, Box 1000, Saint John, N.B. E2L 4L3. Not to be used with any other offers. Valid at participating retailers.

† Reg TM Lisoma International Ltd., UK. Distributed by Afexa Life Sciences, a division of Valeant Pharmaceuticals International, Inc., under license from Lisoma Canada Ltd.
Imagine this movie pitch: “We want to make a politically charged gladiator movie — fight to the death, innocents killing innocents in order to save their own lives, a real bloodbath. And, get this, all of the participants are children! And it’s aimed at an audience of children!”

Alas, there was no such pitch meeting for The Hunger Games, the first film of a trilogy poised to fill the hole left by the end of the Harry Potter and Twilight franchises. That’s because the grim, but moving, thriller is based on a hugely popular book written for tweens and teens by children’s author Suzanne Collins.

When The New York Times put The Hunger Games on its list of Notable Children’s Books of 2008 the paper told us it was a “brilliantly plotted tale” in which “children fight to the death in ritual games” and it was “aimed at ages 12 and up.”

It makes me think of another book that’s creating a stir, Lenore Skenazy’s Free-Range Kids: Giving Our Children the Freedom We Had Without Going Nuts with Worry, which was inspired by the outrage hurled at Skenazy after she allowed her nine-year-old son to take the New York City subway alone. Skenazy hypothesizes that today’s kids are being raised on such short leashes they grow up scared of everything and unable to fend for themselves.

What an interesting contrast. The book that’s popular with parents is about how kids are so overprotected they can’t take the subway on their own, and the book that’s popular with kids has a plot about children killing children that’s so dark many adults would find it difficult to read.

So is The Hunger Games’ popularity a case of kids craving the sense of danger that’s absent from most of their lives? Or does Collins’ brutal tale support the idea that there are dreadfully scary things out there and children should be very, very afraid? Perhaps both.

Now imagine casting such a movie. A litany of young women who’ve already proven they can take care of themselves (on screen, anyway) were up for the central role of reluctant fighter Katniss Everdeen, including Hailee Steinfeld, who bested murderous cowboys in 2010’s Kick-Ass, and Chloë Moretz, who shocked filmgoers with her crude, violent heroine in 2010’s Kick-Ass.

Instead, the role went to 21-year-old Jennifer Lawrence, who has some kick-ass cred of her own, having earned an Oscar nomination for her portrayal of an Ozark Mountains girl traversing dangerous terrain to track down her drug-dealing father in 2010’s Winter’s Bone.

In “Let the Games Begin,” page 38, Lawrence tells us why she thinks The Hunger Games — a movie she says reminds us “of the worst part of humanity” — has struck a nerve with so many people.

Elsewhere in this issue we talk to Jennifer Garner about transforming dairy products into art for Butter (page 34), we’re on the Montreal set of Mirror Mirror with Lily Collins (page 26), Canadian Taylor Kitsch gives us a preview of his Mars movie John Carter (page 22), Ed Helms talks about his two new films, Jeff Who Lives at Home and Dr. Seuss’ The Lorax (page 30), and Emily Blunt discusses the impossible and Salmon Fishing in the Yemen (page 37).

Plus, on page 42, we choose our Eight Favourite Looks from this year’s spring runways.

■ MARNI WEISZ, EDITOR
“The Show blew me away!”
— ESPN.com

MLB 12
THE SHOW

Zone Analog Batting and Pulse Pitching let players perfect their swing and dominate batters with more control than ever before.

Challenge up to 4 friends simultaneously in the all-new Home Run Derby Online mode.

Cross-Platform Play
Transfer your progress from PS3 to PS Vita and back again using the power of cloud saves.
ARNIE SNEERS
Arnold Schwarzenegger shows displeasure while watching the FIS Men’s Downhill Skiing World Cup in Kitzbuehel, Austria.
PHOTO BY MARTIN SCHAUK/GETTY

NIXON’S CLOSE SHAVE
Cynthia Nixon takes a curtain call after the opening performance of Wit in New York City. She plays a cancer patient.
PHOTO BY MICHAEL STEWART/GETTY

KUTCHER STREET SURFS
Caught in a torrential downpour during a trip to São Paulo, Brazil, Ashton Kutcher makes the best of it.
PHOTO BY SPLASH NEWS
Hugh’s Snow Day

Hugh Jackman feeds daughter Ava fresh snow in New York City.

Photo by Splash News

---

Cotillard Wraps Up

In Brooklyn’s Prospect Park, Marion Cotillard (centre) shoots an as-yet untitled movie about an immigrant woman forced to work in burlesque.

Photo by Keystone Press
THIS IS NOT A BRIDESMAIDS SEQUEL

Call it Bridesmaids’ little sister. Four of the stars of last year’s big-buzz comedy Bridesmaids return in this month’s limited-release indie Friends With Kids, though in completely different roles. Jon Hamm and Kristen Wiig, who played friends with benefits in Bridesmaids are now a warring married couple, while Maya Rudolph, who played the bride, and Chris O’Dowd, the Irish cop who stole Wiig’s heart, are now a weary husband and wife raising two children.

None, however, are the stars of this new film about best friends who decide to have a baby together. Those roles go to Adam Scott (TV’s Parks and Recreation) and Jennifer Westfeldt, who also wrote, directed and co-produced the film.

Jennifer who?

There are two ways to answer that question. Professionally, Westfeldt is best-known as the writer and star of the 2001 indie hit Kissing Jessica Stein, about a straight woman who has a gay relationship. But, personally, she’s best known for kissing Jon Hamm; they’ve been in a long-term relationship for about 15 years.

Regarding the Bridesmaids connection, after a screening of the movie at the Toronto International Film Festival, Westfeldt told the audience that it was an accident. “We had no idea Bridesmaids would be the gajillion-dollar success that it is, we knew it would be great, and now we’re just riding their coattails.” —MW

THE ART OF FILM

Bruce White is a North Carolina-based tattoo artist who, in his spare time, likes to paint movie icons on black velvet, like these ones (clockwise from left) of Javier Bardem, Bill Murray and Carrie Fisher in iconic roles. But when asked why he’s attracted to the medium White doesn’t use words like kitsch or camp. Just the opposite. “Some of the earliest velvet paintings were actually created centuries ago depicting Christian religious icons,” he says. “I’m a huge sci-fi fan and these subjects have become so embedded in pop culture they have become modern icons.” Each piece is one of a kind; see more at www.velvetgeek.com. —MW

On Home Turf:
THE SEVENTH SON

Julianne Moore and Jeff Bridges will haunt Vancouver’s streets from mid-March to mid-May. They’re in town to shoot The Seventh Son, a spooky 18th-century story about a young wannabe exorcist (Ben Barnes) who is tricked into unleashing an evil witch (Moore). Bridges plays the young man’s teacher, Master Gregory. Expect the movie to hit theatres in February 2013. —MW
UNCHARTED
GOLDEN ABYSS™

UNCOVER THE DARK SECRET
behind the 400-year-old massacre of a Spanish expedition as Nathan Drake races into Central America in search of a legendary lost city.

- Play with standard controls or touch, tap & steer to traverse and unravel hidden secrets
- Intuitive motion control aiming for precision accuracy
- High-def cinematic story telling on the 5" OLED screen

Visit PlayStation.ca for more information.

*PlayStation” is a registered trademark of Sony Computer Entertainment Inc. The “PSVITA” logo is a trademark of the same company. ©2011 Sony Computer Entertainment America LLC.
UNCHARTED Golden Abyss is a trademark of Sony Computer Entertainment America LLC. Developed by Bend Studios. Software and Hardware sold separately. NEVER STOP PLAYING.
Quote Unquote

She’s completely insane, and that’s always fun. She’s unpredictable, and when I read the script I said, ‘That is the role I’ve been waiting to play for a long time.’

— OLIIVIWA LILDE ON PLAYING A STRIPPER-TURNED-BUTTER-CARVER IN BUMMER

PREGNANT MOM TREND!

Pregnant actors Alyson Hannigan (left) and Jennifer Garner both utilize their young daughters, Satyana and Seraphina respectively, to plug parking meters in Los Angeles. Garner is due this month, while Hannigan’s baby should arrive in May.

PHOTOS BY SPLASH NEWS

Baby Bane

Not so scary now, are you Bane? The mumbling villain from this summer’s blockbuster The Dark Knight Rises gets the Pop! Heroes bobble-head treatment.
Any idea whose brother this is?

Meet Dave Franco, younger sibling of the equally adorable James Franco.

Twenty-six-year-old Dave plays high school drug dealer Eric in this month’s 21 Jump Street. It’s not his first movie role, he played “Greg the Soccer Player” in 2007’s Superbad and Mark, a bully, in last year’s Fright Night, but it may be his biggest.

If you really want a taste of Franco Junior, though, check out his short films on Funnyordie.com, including the hilarious “Acting With James Franco” series, in which Dave gets acting tips from his satirically over-confident big bro.

—MW

Robert De Niro’s ability to transform is no secret, but this story from the set of Being Flynn, in which De Niro plays real-life homeless man Jonathan Flynn, still amazes. After a day of shooting pickup shots around New York City, De Niro ducked into the swanky Greenwich Hotel, which he co-owns and where he spends much of his time, to clean up. Hotel security was promptly called to attend to the homeless man who had entered the building. —MW Who’s Bro?

When an animated Hollywood movie is dubbed for a foreign country, talent native to that country usually do the voice work. Not so for Danny DeVito, who plays the title role in Dr. Seuss’ The Lorax. DeVito also voices the Lorax in the film’s Spanish, Italian, Russian and German versions. It’s not that he’s fluent in those languages; having a film’s star dub in foreign languages is just becoming more common. First, a guide track is recorded by an actor who speaks the language, then the Hollywood star does their best to copy it with the help of a dialect coach. —MW

Viva el Lorax!
The thing with making a movie about waiters is, you’re bound to have a lot of chefs in the kitchen.

Joe Dinicol, star of the Canadian comedy Servitude — about one waiter’s crazy last night on the job — confirms that “a good 90 to 95 percent” of the film’s cast had waiting experience, as did writer Mike Sparaga and director Warren P. Sonoda.

“It’s really the only thing we’re qualified to do other than acting, if we’re at all qualified to do that in the first place,” says the 28-year-old Stratford, Ontario, native. He’s been acting since he played Antony and Cleopatra’s son at the Stratford Shakespeare Festival in 1993; he’s also waited or bussed tables at many restaurants in that time, including Toronto’s Gladstone Hotel and Mildred’s Temple Kitchen.

But, says Dinicol, the cast’s waiting experience only made Servitude a better film. “It brought up a lot of stories and memories and creativity because we all had ideas about what to put in,” he says. “If someone had an idea, we tried it. If it worked, great. If not, no one was too precious about it.”

Dinicol’s big contribution was the snap. “I was shooting a scene with Aaron Ashmore [who plays a customer] and he’s giving me a hard time, and he sort of snapped his fingers. And I was like, ‘Okay, we have to stop. We haven’t done the snapping fingers thing.’ I mean, I’ve been snapped at so many times in a restaurant I can’t even count. And I looked at Mike Sparaga and I was like, ‘Dude, we almost didn’t put in someone snapping their fingers at you.’”

Dinicol is in the midst of his longest stretch without waiting tables. “Almost two years, knock on wood,” he says. “I always assume I’ll be back there.”

And that wouldn’t be such a bad thing.

“I actually quite liked it,” he says. “On a good day you get to talk to people and charm them and entertain them, satiate them and bring them food. On a good day it can be a very, very good job…. Unfortunately, some people go to a restaurant and they aren’t really there to enjoy themselves. They’re there because they think they deserve to be there or because they can just afford it.” —MARNI WEISZ

---

SPOTLIGHT

TIPS from a WAITER

SERVITUDE

HITS THEATRES MARCH 30TH
Love FREE Movies? We’re the bank for you.

A SCENE® ScotiaCard® debit card rewards you with FREE Movies and more. More often.

Earn SCENE points on all your everyday purchases - points that can be redeemed for FREE movies and more.

Visit a Scotiabank branch or scotiabank.com/scene for FREE movie details.

Registered trademark of SCENE IP LP; used under license.
*Registered trademark of The Bank of Nova Scotia.
® Cineplex is a registered trademark and Escape with Us™ is a trademark of Cineplex Entertainment LP; used under license.
When you obtain a SCENE ScotiaCard on a new SCENE-eligible bank account attached to your SCENE membership, 1000 SCENE points will be added to your SCENE membership account after you make your first debit purchase, which must be made within 60 days of opening your account. 1,000 additional SCENE points will be added to your SCENE account for having your payroll deposited to your new SCENE eligible Scotiabank account or a total of 2 pre-authorized debits (PADs) and/or pre-authorized credits (PACs) provided your automatic payroll or PAD/PAC is set up within 60 days of opening your account. All pre-authorized transactions must occur within the same month. These offers do not apply to existing SCENE-eligible Scotiabank account holders. Pre-authorized payroll or 1 of the following combinations of PADs and PACs must be transacted in one account (the same): a) 2 PADs; b) 2 PACs or c) 1 PAD and 1 PAC. The 1,000 bonus points will be credited to your account within 2 statement cycles of setting up the pre-authorized payroll, PADs and/or PACs.
SCENE points are awarded for debit purchases and Interac Flash transactions from a SCENE eligible account using your SCENE ScotiaCard. Normal Interac Flash transaction limits apply. Points accumulated using the SCENE ScotiaCard will be updated within 2-3 business days. SCENE points can only be redeemed at participating Cineplex Entertainment theatres or online at cineplex.com or scene.ca for other rewards offers.
ALL DRESSED UP

RACHEL McADAMS
In L.A. for the premiere of Journey 2: The Mysterious Island.
Photo by Keystone Press

PAULA PATTON
At Warner Brothers’ post-Golden Globes party in L.A.
Photo by Keystone Press

VIOLA DAVIS
Glowing at the Screen Actors Guild Awards in L.A.
Photo by Keystone Press
JEAN DUJARDIN
In Los Angeles for the Screen Actors Guild Awards.
PHOTO BY SPLASH NEWS

TINA FEY
At the Golden Globes in Beverly Hills.
PHOTO BY KEYSTONE PRESS

DANIEL RADCLIFFE
At London's Royal Festival Hall for Woman In Black's premiere.
PHOTO BY SPLASH NEWS
IN THEATRES

MARCH 2

JOHN CARTER
Director Andrew Stanton (WALL•E) says he's been obsessed with Edgar Rice Burroughs’ John Carter book series since he was a teenager. Stanton's special-effects extravaganza stars Taylor Kitsch as John Carter, a Civil War vet transported to Mars who finds himself caught between two warring races. See Taylor Kitsch interview, page 22.

BEING FLYNN
Paul Dano stars as a wannabe writer who takes a job in a homeless shelter where he meets his estranged father (Robert De Niro), a man dealing with demons and delusions of grandeur.

MARCH 9

DR. SEUSS’ THE LORAX
The producers of 2010’s Despicable Me bring Dr. Seuss’s beloved eco-tale to the big screen. A boy (Zac Efron) living in a world without nature sets out to impress a girl (Taylor Swift) by finding a tree. His search leads him to the bitter Once-ler (Ed Helms), who tells him of The Lorax (Danny DeVito), a small creature who did his best to guard nature from man’s destruction. See Ed Helms interview, page 30.

PROJECT X
This raucous comedy is being dubbed “The Hangover for teens” with good reason. Three high school seniors — Thomas Mann, Jonathan Daniel Brown and Oliver Cooper — striving for popularity host a party that gets utterly out of control. Who invited the guy with the flamethrower?

FRIENDS WITH KIDS
Best friends Jason (Adam Scott) and Julie (Jennifer Westfeldt) watch as all their married friends have kids, only to have the added burden ruin their relationships. Still, they know they want children. So they decide to team up and have a baby while remaining “just friends.”

SALMON FISHING IN THE YEMEN
In this lighthearted, politically inspired comedy, a British fisheries scientist (Ewan McGregor) is given the seemingly impossible task of fulfilling a Yemeni sheik’s (Amr Waked) dream of building a fishing industry in his dusty Middle Eastern homeland. Emily Blunt steps in as the sheik’s assistant. See Emily Blunt interview, page 37.

Salmon Fishing in the Yemen’s Ewan McGregor

Dr. Seuss’ The Lorax
21 JUMP STREET
The 1980s TV series that launched Johnny Depp’s career — he makes a cameo in the film — becomes a big-screen comedy starring Jonah Hill and Channing Tatum as incompetent cops whose youthful looks make them the perfect choice to go undercover at a high school and infiltrate a dangerous drug ring.

PAYBACK
Canadian documentarian Jennifer Baichwal (Manufactured Landscapes) adapts Margaret Atwood’s book Payback: Debt and the Shadow Side of Wealth, which examines the origins of all sorts of debt — financial, societal and environmental — and what debt means to different societies around the world.

CASA DE MI PADRE
The fact that Will Ferrell doesn’t speak Spanish didn’t stop him from making this spoof of Spanish-language TV soap operas. He worked with a translator for a month to perfect his delivery playing an upright rancher whose brother (Diego Luna) involves the family in a war with a drug lord (Gael García Bernal).

JEFF WHO LIVES AT HOME
Writers/directors Mark and Jay Duplass (Cyrus) love to explore the psyches of quirky, emotionally lost men. They continue the trend here with this comedy about slacker Jeff (Jason Segel), who joins his brother Pat (Ed Helms) on a quest to catch Pat’s wife (Judy Greer) cheating. See Ed Helms interview, page 30.

BULLY
In this award-winning documentary we see what life is like for five American teens troubled by constant bullying. We move from high school hallways to the kids’ homes, where they and their families talk about the emotional and physical distress caused by bullying. CONTINUED
THE HUNGER GAMES

The first novel in Suzanne Collins’ best-selling trilogy comes to the big screen with Jennifer Lawrence as teenage rebel Katniss Everdeen. Set in the future, the former United States is now ruled by a pitiless government that demands teens from various districts battle each other in televised fights to the death called “The Hunger Games.” Can Katniss and her partner Peeta (Josh Hutcherson) survive and hold onto their humanity? See Jennifer Lawrence interview, page 38.

FOOTNOTE

Nominated for Best Foreign Language Film at this year’s Oscars, this Israeli dramedy focuses on the theological and personal conflicts between a father and son who both teach in the Talmud department at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem.

MIRROR MIRROR

Director Tarsem Singh’s (Immortals) colourful, family-friendly film is the first of the year’s two Snow White pics to hit theatres. Lily Collins plays the naive Snow White, who’s sent packing by the Evil Queen (Julia Roberts) and finds herself making friends with a bunch of dwarfs and a handsome prince (Armie Hammer). See Lily Collins interview, page 26.
WRATH OF THE TITANS
In this sequel to Clash of the Titans, demigod Perseus (Sam Worthington), Queen Andromeda (Rosamund Pike) and Poseidon’s son, Agenor (Toby Kebbell), come to the aid of Zeus (Liam Neeson), whose weakened control of Olympus leads to the release of the deadly Titans.

SERVITUDE
Working in a kitschy steakhouse is bad enough, but when the servers, led by waiter Josh (Joe Dinicol), find out they’re all going to be fired they take out their frustrations on the diners who torment them. See Joe Dinicol interview, page 14.

THE FORGIVENESS OF BLOOD
It’s the clash of old ways vs. modernism, young people vs. their elders, in this Albanian film (directed by American Joshua Marston) about a teenage boy who’s kept prisoner in his home to settle a feud between two families.
OUT OF THIS WORLD
Canadian actor Taylor Kitsch gets his big break starring in the solar system-spanning period piece John Carter

By Marni Weisz

Taylor Kitsch is sitting at the kitchen table of a two-bedroom suite at London’s Soho Hotel. The B.C. native — he was born in Kelowna, raised just outside Vancouver, but now calls Austin, Texas, home — is in England to spread the word about what is undoubtedly the biggest movie of his career, John Carter. He’s already been to Paris and Munich to schmooze with the media and show clips from the film.

“It’s coming out in a couple of months and we’re raring to go,” says Kitsch over the phone. “It’s been so long since we started working on it… We did some pickup shots six or seven months ago, but we started shooting on January 17th, 2010.”

That’s a long time in the career of an anxious young actor. To date, Kitsch is best known for playing an alcoholic high school football player on TV’s Friday Night Lights and the mutant Gambit in X-Men Origins: Wolverine. But two years is not an unusually long time when you’re making such an epic, special-effects laden film.

And this one is epic. It starts as a Civil War-era Western and ends on Mars.

Kitsch plays the titular John Carter, a veteran of the American Civil War who joins up with a nomadic tribe of very tall, green-skinned Martians called Tharks after he’s somehow transported to the faraway planet. How does he get there? “I can’t give too much away,” says Kitsch, “but he’s being chased by Apaches and runs into this cave, and something mysterious happens.”

There’s also a humanoid species on Mars, and when the Tharks take their princess (Lynn Collins) captive Carter has to play peacemaker and get her released.

If the idea of combining the 1800s with extra-terrestrials seems derivative of last year’s Cowboys & Aliens, or an Earthling fighting on behalf of another planet’s inhabitants reminds you of Avatar, you should know this movie is based on the century-old Barsoom series by novelist Edgar Rice Burroughs — Barsoom being the name the planet’s natives use for their home world.

Best known as Tarzan’s creator, Burroughs actually wrote about John Carter first, and the series kicked off with A Princess of Mars in February 1912.

When asked whether it’s frustrating to see his film compared to Cowboys & Aliens or Avatar, since John Carter’s been around so much longer, Kitsch sighs. “I think that no matter what movie you make, there are always going to be other movies that you can compare it to. And I think that in five years people are going to be comparing other movies to John Carter.”

Continued ►
That would be the hope. After all, landing the title role in a movie rumoured to have cost about $200-million was quite a coup for Kitsch, who turns 31 next month. Reports are, both Jon Hamm and Josh Duhamel met with Disney to discuss the role. So why did the studio settle on the lesser-known Kitsch?

“I don’t know, that’s a good question for Stanton,” Kitsch says of the film’s director, Andrew Stanton, who makes his live-action debut with this film after helming the animated Pixar films Finding Nemo and WALL•E. “I was on my boat in Austin, on the lake, and he called me — it’s always a good sign when the director makes the call himself — and he said, ‘I just wanted to say great reading, and great screen test, and prepare yourself because you’re about to have a lot of fun.’”

Could it have been Kitsch’s physique that earned him the role? The actor had to be strung up on wires 150 feet in the air for some scenes that take advantage of Mars’ lighter gravity. And before he became an actor, Kitsch made a living as a physical trainer and played Junior A hockey for the Langley Hornets.

But Kitsch doesn’t think his muscles earned him the part. “I mean, if Jon Hamm had gotten the role I’m sure he would have prepared himself. I’d like to think it had more to do with my acting ability. In the trailer you see a lot of the physical stuff but there’s also lots of internal stuff, a lot of twists and turns in the plot.”

Just two months after John Carter hits theatres, Kitsch stars in a second big-budget, special effects movie that involves a surprising use of aliens — Battleship, based on the board game of the same name. But Kitsch, who plays a navy officer forced to take charge, insists he wasn’t taken aback to see aliens had invaded Battleship’s script, despite having nothing to do with the Hasbro game. “It makes perfect sense,” he says.

So, aside from taking place on battleships, how does the movie relate to the game? “There are little moments, an homage here and there. How we interact with the aliens when they come down,” says Kitsch, adding, “and the aliens look like pegs.”

Kitsch continues his big year with an about-face, starring in Oliver Stone’s character-driven thriller Savages in July. He plays a hippie pot grower who takes on a Mexican drug cartel when they kidnap the girlfriend (Blake Lively) that he shares with his business partner (Aaron Johnson). “It’s just an incredible film,” says Kitsch. “All of the cast, and Oliver, the characters and the story, it’s all very unapologetic.”

With such a busy schedule, it’s no surprise when Kitsch admits he spends very little time in Canada these days. “I get back to B.C. maybe once a year, if that, at Christmas,” he says.

But that’s okay, because the dream home he’s building in Austin is almost ready. He fell in love with the Texas city renowned for its rich arts community when he started shooting Friday Night Lights there in 2006.

“It’s well-situated between L.A. and New York,” he says. “I would never want to live in L.A., for a variety of reasons. Everyone’s so creative in Austin, none of my friends are actors. They don’t care who you are, which I love.”

Marni Weisz is the editor of Cineplex Magazine.
CINEPLEX Family Favourites

Join us for family movies only

$2.50* per ticket, taxes included

Saturday Mornings 11:00am

Visit Cineplex.com/family for tickets and participating theatres

*A portion of proceeds go towards supporting Starlight Children’s Foundation Canada
In only her fourth feature film, newcomer Lily Collins takes on the iconic role of fairy tale heroine Snow White for Mirror Mirror. So how did she get the role? Well, those eyebrows didn’t hurt. — BY INGRID RANDOJA
A prince leads his horse through a foggy, snow-covered forest lined with silver birch trees.

Except it isn’t really a prince, it’s actor Armie Hammer, the fog is actually a mixture of compressed mineral oil and CO2, the snow isn’t snow but three different types of road salt mixed together, and the birch trees are, in fact, dead birch logs standing on their ends to resemble live trees.

The horse, however, is real.

We are on the stunning Montreal set of Mirror Mirror, also known as “one of those Snow White movies.” Filmed under the watchful eye of director Tarsem Singh (Immortals), Mirror Mirror arrives in theatres a little more than two months before the year’s other Snow White pic, Snow White and the Huntsman.

What’s the difference between the two films? Snow White and the Huntsman is the edgier, darker tale that stars Kristen Stewart as the avenging Snow White, while Mirror Mirror is the comedic, family-friendly version starring up-and-comer Lily Collins as the naive princess who goes toe-to-toe with her evil queen stepmother (Julia Roberts) and falls for the handsome prince (Hammer).

The daughter of Genesis drummer and successful solo artist Phil Collins, the 22-year-old Collins has a fresh-faced beauty perfectly suited to a fairy tale princess. Oh, and a pair of dark, thick eyebrows that director Singh says caught his attention immediately and clinched her casting.

“It’s a compliment,” says Collins. “He’s a very visual director so he knew exactly what he wanted Snow to look like, and apparently he responded well to my eyebrows. [Laughs.]”

Collins is seated in front of another of the film’s amazing sets — the dwarfs’ home, which is located inside a huge tree. Poke around and...
idea that Snow White is all about colour, “ says Collins. “Tarsem takes taking visuals — from the magical sets to the over-the-top costumes. to live on just how beautiful she is. ”

“Her and I have joked about it ’cause everyone thinks there’s this huge rivalry, but there’s not, we’re friends and we’re really excited for each other. And I think she’s going to do an amazing job and I can’t wait to see that version, but for me, this is the version I’ve always lived with in my head. ”

As with all Tarsem Singh films, Mirror Mirror is bursting with breathtaking visuals — from the magical sets to the over-the-top costumes. “The whole look of the movie is so vibrant and it really plays on the idea that Snow White is all about colour,” says Collins. “Tarsem takes colour to a new extreme in this film. And I literally have butterflies coming off of my dress, so while the film isn’t shot in 3D, it has a 3D feel.”

Mirror Mirror is Collins’ fourth film. She debuted as Sandra Bullock’s daughter in The Blind Side, then played Paul Bettany’s niece in Priest, and she was last seen in Abduction as Taylor Lautner’s gal pal. Although her movie résumé spans only a few years, the British-born Collins started working in showbiz about the same time she stopped wearing diapers.

“I’ve always loved performing. I did a TV show when I was two in England,” she remembers. When she was six, her American mother, Jill Tavelman, divorced Collins and moved with Lily from their Surrey country mansion to Beverly Hills.

In L.A., Collins continued to study acting, did some modelling and TV work, but also took a keen interest in journalism. As a teenager she penned a column about life in L.A. for U.K.’s Elle Girl, and contributed to Seventeen and Teen Vogue. At one point she thought she might become a journalist rather than actor.

“I went to USC to study broadcast journalism and writing,” she explains, “and I’ve written for magazines since I was 15, so I am always going to love journalism and I hope to continue writing. But there was a point where I was interviewing actors who I then was going to be auditioning with. It got a little bit awkward.”

Maybe it was inevitable that acting would win out. Her grandmother, June Collins, was a theatrical agent, and father Phil was a child actor who played the Artful Dodger in the original London stage production of Oliver!, and was an extra in A Hard Day’s Night and Chitty Chitty Bang Bang before focusing on music. It’s a side of her father she only recently got to know.

“A few years ago I was on vacation with him and I got some emails about putting myself on tape,” she says, ”so for the first time I got my flip-camera out and my dad and I did scenes together.

“We had never done that before. For first, it was like, ‘This is awkward,’ then it was really fun because I saw him light up in a way I hadn’t seen before. Acting was the first thing he did, and all of a sudden he’s like, ‘Why don’t you try this, or let’s do this,’ and it became this new part of our relationship that we had never entered before.”

Her daddy will surely get a kick out of seeing his little princess as, well, a princess, and Collins herself is thrilled she gets to play the enchanting incarnation of Snow White as opposed to the armou-clad, warrior found in that competing movie.

“I actually read the other script,” says Collins, “and they are two totally different stories. I’m really excited for Kristen, I think she’s perfect for their version.

“Her and I have joked about it ’cause everyone thinks there’s this huge rivalry, but there’s not, we’re friends and we’re really excited for each other. And I think she’s going to do an amazing job and I can’t wait to see that version, but for me, this is the version I’ve always lived with in my head.”

Ingrid Randoja is the deputy editor of Cineplex magazine.

Dream Class

What do Mirror Mirror director Tarsem Singh, Michael Bay (Transformers) and Zack Snyder (300) have in common? They were classmates at Pasadena’s Art Center College of Design.

“In that film class there were eight people, Zack was with me, Michael Bay was with me,” says Singh. “Our professor said something like only five percent of the people who come out of film schools stay in the industry. Say you wanted to be a director and you wind up being a caterer on set, that’s still considered in the industry.

“Out of those eight most came out of school and were working immediately, and we were employing our teachers in about eight months.”

Whatever they learned paid off big-time — the three former classmates’ films have earned a combined total of $5.9-billion worldwide. —IR
NATIONAL DENIM DAY
HELP FIGHT
BREAST CANCER

DONATE $5

WEAR JEANS ON MAY 15TH
CUREFOUNDATION.COM 1-888-592-CURE
THE LORAX
HITS THEATRES MARCH 2ND

JEFF WHO LIVES AT HOME
HITS THEATRES MARCH 16TH
Helms is everywhere these days.

Usually in a supporting role, true, but the 38-year-old actor has a way of snagging the spotlight in movies and TV shows. Some would even say his ability to mine comic gold out of insecure backup characters has turned Helms into a star.

He probably wouldn’t, though.

“Star? That’s just sort of this label that other people generate,” Helms says during a ride through Los Angeles on his way to the taping of a TV talk show. “It’s not something that feels very different while you’re just walking around every day. It’s kind of like a birthday, like ‘How does it feel to be 35?’ I’m still the same idiot I was before.

“But it has definitely changed the game for me professionally, within the entertainment industry,” he acknowledges. “Which I’m really grateful for, that’s just something that comes along once in a lifetime.”

We watched Helms break out of the (wolf) pack to become the heart and deranged soul of the hit Hangover films. Then, this season, his self-doubting, socially awkward Andy Bernard was promoted to replace Steve Carell’s self-assured, socially awkward Michael Scott as head of The Office.

And, this month, he’s in two new movies, Dr. Seuss’ The Lorax and Jeff Who Lives at Home — not playing the Lorax or Jeff, though.

“The Lorax is a big animated movie based on the Dr. Seuss book,” Helms explains. “Danny DeVito is the Lorax, I’m the Once-ler.”

For those unfamiliar with Seuss’s 1971 eco-parable, the Lorax is a mythical creature whose mission is to protect trees and the imaginary animals those trees support. The Once-ler, however, narrates the tale of his own initially innocent, increasingly greed-driven, destruction of a forest — and is arguably the book’s real, well, star.

“There’s a wide range of emotions,” says Helms, a veteran of voiceover commercials and TV cartoons, of his first major movie voice role. “Joy, accomplishment, megalomania, remorse — and he can be sort of mean.”

Jeff Who Lives at Home was written and directed by Jay and Mark Duplass, the brother team that started in the no-budget mumblecore movement (The Puffy Chair, Baghead) and moved up the indie ladder with Cyrus.

“Gosh, I am so proud of this movie,” Helms gushes. “Jason Segel and I are co-stars. We play brothers. Jason is Jeff, I’m Pat, and the story is I find out that my wife might be cheating on me, and Jeff and I go on this madcap caper to catch her in the act. We’re very contentious brothers who have this whole big journey of self-discovery and rediscovering our brotherhood.

“It’s a very poignant movie, not outright comedy that you might expect from Jason and I,” Helms notes. “That’s what was so fun, and what I love so much about Mark and Jay Duplass. They just kind of wring it out of you, you didn’t even know you had it.”

As a young man, Helms certainly didn’t know he had what it took to be an actor.

Born and raised in Atlanta, Georgia, he went to Oberlin College in Ohio to study geology, but wound up earning a film degree. It was during an exchange semester at New York University that Helms first acted on a childhood dream and went up on stage at a comedy club.

After graduation, he edited commercials for a living...
“There’s a wide range of emotions,” Helms says of voicing The Once-ler. “Joy, accomplishment, megalomania, remorse — and he can be sort of mean.”

and trained with the improv troupe Upright Citizens Brigade.

Five years (off and on) as a correspondent for the satirical news series The Daily Show followed. Carell, who was a colleague there, helped Helms get his first role in a major movie, Evan Almighty.

Of course, they’ve worked together on The Office as well. And while Helms clearly misses acting with Carell, he admits his day job is now more invigorating. “We’ve come into our own as a full ensemble cast,” he says. “Steve’s departure was a massive heartbreak because he’s one of the funniest human beings on Earth — and one of the most benevolent, wonderful guys you’ll ever work with. But that departure also offered all of us this incredible opportunity to just step up and reinvent this show in a way that few shows have an opportunity to do.”

Also on the Helms agenda: reinterpreting his favourite kind of music in hopes of widening its audience.

“I’ve had a passion for bluegrass music for most of my life,” says Helms, whose self-penned ukulele ballads about his character Stu’s troubles are highlights of the Hangover films. “I’ve played in a lot of bands, particularly one called The Lonesome Trio since college; we still play together. I play guitar and banjo. I help put together the L.A. Bluegrass Situation weekend every year, and we get incredibly enthusiastic crowds. It really blows me away. I think there really is a market for it. Our interpretation of the word bluegrass is very broad; it really encompasses a lot of cool fun.”

So what other ambitions is he hiding? Moving into the more prestigious, if not necessarily harder, realm of dramatic acting? Putting that film degree into action behind the camera?

Helms seems more than content to be right where he is; maybe with others ahead of him, but second to none at what he does. “Comedic actor is probably how I would describe myself at this point,” he says. “I came up through stand-up comedy, but that seems to have definitely taken a backseat to acting. My acting is limited to comedic roles, for the most part. Jeff Who Lives at Home may change that game a little, but I am totally okay with it. It’s what I’ve always wanted to do.

“As far as aspirations beyond, that’s kind of a grey area. I wouldn’t rule anything out, but I really just love what I do.”

Bob Strauss lives in L.A. where he writes about movies and filmmakers.
NOW OPEN IN YOUR PANTS.

The World’s Smallest Box Office™
Showtimes. Trailers. Tickets with no service fees*. Download our App or go to m.cineplex.com

*Standard data rates may apply.
Jennifer Garner talks about finding her voice as a producer, time off with her family and mastering the art of competitive butter sculpting for Butter

By Ingrid Randoja
Tell me about creating Laura Pickler, this hilarious, high-strung woman who basks in the glory of her husband's butter-carving career.

“I did the strangest research for this movie. YouTube is a wonderful thing for actors.”

What did you watch on YouTube?

“I watched archive footage of all kinds of first ladies — first ladies of Iowa, first ladies of Texas, presidential first ladies — people Laura would aspire to be. And I watched a lot of beauty queens. Then weird things like Muhammad Ali, when he was at his ‘float like a butterfly, sting like a bee’ stage. It was a blast.”
And you have to carve butter in the movie. How was that?

Are you artistic? Are you visually minded?

“I don’t look at the world visually at all! From getting dressed to leaving my house and knowing which way to go, to the way a room should be set up, none of it makes sense to me. So I am not a visual person, but I can mimic someone’s body movements. I don’t know if it’s from so many years studying ballet, but I can do it with a stunt double and I could do it here.”

Right, you worked with a food artist to learn how to carve.

“Yes, I just watched this man work. I got under his hands to see how he was holding his tools. That’s really what I cared about, the way he would divot something out, or the way he held onto the back of something while he was working on the front, what that looked like. I took pictures of his hands, I didn’t try to master it. He told me to keep my day job.”

Part of your day job was to act as a producer on the film for your own production company, Vandalia Films. What was that like?

“I started this production company with my partner eight years ago and this is the first thing we’ve actually gotten made. But the process of developing scripts and getting almost all the way to the finish line before a movie is pulled, going through that process so many times, gave me my own voice.”

Were you lacking a voice?

“I’ll tell you, being in on notes meetings, sitting down with the studio again and again and again, reminded me that all I studied in college was dramatic literature. I thought, ‘I know how to break down a script as well as any of these people, why am I sitting back wishing this was different.’ Now I just say things. And I am older. It’s good to be older.”

Are you that confident on set as well?

“Yes, I can walk on set and say, ‘You are not going to be able to have a top light on me, that won’t work.’ And that’s really because of Alias, being in front of a camera every day for five years. I wouldn’t trade that.”

Are you looking forward to time off with the new baby?

“That’s the great thing and the hard thing about having a baby as an actress — it’s an imposed amount of time off, but it’s awesome once you have kids. It’s great to have time off. I love my job, but I am happy to spend time with my kids.”

Ingrid Randoja is the deputy editor of Cineplex Magazine.

---

Historic Butter Cow

Iowa, the state depicted in Butter, has a proud heritage of butter carving. Last August, this butter cow marked the 100th anniversary of butter cows at the Iowa State Fair. Carved by butter master Sarah Pratt, it weighs 600 pounds (a real cow weighs 1,000 pounds), and would be able to butter 19,200 slices of toast. Thankfully, much of the butter is recycled and can be reused for up to 10 years. That’s a relief when you think about the sheer volume of milk cows had to produce to create their own butter effigy. —MW
On Salmon Fishing in the Yemen, about two Brits (Blunt, Ewan McGregor) who bond while bringing a Yemeni sheik’s dream of fishing for salmon in his home country to life.

“I got a call from my agent saying there’s a film called Salmon Fishing in the Yemen. I just said, ‘What, are you serious?’ He said, ‘Yeah’... I was like, ‘What is that?’ I read 20 pages and I said yes. It was so wonderful. It’s the most powerful script, it was so clever and a little off the wall and it was a mix of so many different things and it was funny and it was poignant and it was lovely. It was something uplifting, thank God, about the Middle East; there’s finally a story that is uplifting.”

On how they spent their evenings off, first while filming in London, then in Morocco, which stood in for Yemen.

“In London everyone just went back to their own house and did their own things. We were so tired, we were shooting six days a week most of the time. Then we went to Morocco and it was heaven. All the crew and the cast were in the same hotel. People would have drinks at night and then we’d wander across the street to this French restaurant. It was just great; it was like being at camp. People get really stupid.”

On what she wants people to take away from this movie.

“That the impossible can happen. That the impossible is possible. I think that is what the title represents. Salmon Fishing in the Yemen seems to be an impossible feat and far-fetched and yet it can happen. That’s what I love about the film. There is something hopeful in it.” — MATHIEU CHANTELOIS
All eyes are on 21-year-old Oscar nominee Jennifer Lawrence as The Hunger Games, the first film of the franchise touted to fill the Harry Potter void, hits theatres. So is she feeling the pressure?

BY INGRID RANDOJA
You had to get fit and trim to play Katniss. Was it difficult to play such a physical role while keeping your weight down?

“It’s funny, I’m eating right now as I answer that [chewing noises]. Actually, there was so much activity in the movie that I had to eat more on this film than any other. Because you have to be consistent, and when I would run up and down a mountain all day and all of a sudden I lost three pounds, which shows, then you have to eat a cheeseburger to get it back so you look the same. So it was hard to actually keep the weight on.”

Did you have a nutritionist and trainer on set?

“We had a trainer, and I started out with a nutritionist, and when we got to the place where they went, ‘Okay, that’s it,’ then I ate whatever I wanted, exercised and kept my body looking the same.”
Is it true you fell in love with archery?
“I did. I have a love/hate relationship with archery. It’s a bitch when you mess it up and you hit the inside of your arm and it swells up and it hurts. But then you hit the target, you hit the bull’s eye, it’s the best feeling in the entire world. I really did start to love it.”

And is it safe to say you are the best Oscar-nominated tree climber out there?
“Oh, that’s quite a title, but I’ll go for it.”

What’s the secret to being a good tree climber?
“A harness and a wire [laughs]. The secret is I was trained with a specific kind of choreography — this hand goes here, this hand goes there, using these knots to hold onto. And those knots were then transferred over to the tree where they were disguised to look like little knobs in the tree bark. And then it’s just choreography.”

Why do you think The Hunger Games has struck a nerve with so many people?
“Because it’s a story that reminds us of the worst part of humanity. We’re living in a world obsessed with reality television and our shock factor is constantly desensitized. It takes more and more to surprise us and interest us, and we feed off of other people’s trauma.”

And then there is Katniss, who represents female empowerment.
“Absolutely, she is a symbol for revolt and hope and freedom. She is this young girl who is forced to do things that are unimaginable. She wants more for the world. She’s kind of a futuristic Joan of Arc.”

There is so much pressure associated with the role — living up to the expectations of the fans, and carrying what may ultimately be three films on your shoulders. What’s that like?
“You can’t really think about that. I mean, I am aware of it and I appreciate it, understand its gravity, but you can’t think about it too much or it’ll freak ya out.”

Brotherly Advice
Liam Hemsworth (The Last Song) plays Katniss Everdeen’s (Jennifer Lawrence) best friend and hunting pal Gale Hawthorne in The Hunger Games. Like Lawrence, Hemsworth — the younger brother of Chris Hemsworth (Thor) — had to transform physically to play a young man who, like the rest of his community, doesn’t have enough to eat.
“It turns out his brother helped him do that. “I lost a lot of weight, I wanted to look somewhat hungry,” he says on the line from L.A. “One of the biggest inspirations before I started shooting came from my brother when he texted me and said, ‘Hey fatty, it’s called The Hunger Games not The Eating Games.’ So I started working out a lot more and eating a lot less.” —IR

Cineplex.com Hunger Games Contest!
District 6 Keyword: Protection
READ THE TRILOGY

YOUR NEXT GREAT READ STARTING AT $10.99

Indigo
Enrich your life

Indigo Chapters indigo.ca
COLOUR BLOCKING
It’s back — and works beautifully with the season’s hottest hues in this dress from Agatha Ruiz de la Prada.
PHOTO BY GETTY FOR Image.net
MUST-HAVE COLOURS

Spring’s three hottest colours — orange, yellow and pink — are perfectly pulled together at Badgley Mischka.

THE NEW NEON

Marc Jacobs, and many others, zipped back to the ’80s to stock up on neon. A skinny tie completes the retro look.

ABSTRACT PRINTS

Do we see fish, or are those flowers? It’s a walking Rorschach test on the Lela Rose runway.

STILL MAD FOR MAD MEN

Carolina Herrera channels Betty Draper for this ladylike frock and scarf featuring another hot trend — bird prints.

Photo by Frazer Harrison/ Getty Images

Photo by Keystone Press

Photo by Mike Coppola/ Getty Images
THE SHOE
Footwear of the season? It’s a kitten heel, which pairs perfectly with Tory Burch’s school-girl inspired ensemble.
PHOTO BY FERNANDA CALFAT/GETTY FOR IMAGE.NET

ART DECO
This Jill Stuart dress hits three of our favourite trends — Art Deco-inspired, flowy skirt and that brilliant orange.
PHOTO BY FRAZER HARRISON/GETTY FOR IMAGE.NET

WHITE LIGHT
For both men and women, stark, ethereal white is huge. Here’s QingQing Wu’s take on the trend for VLOV.
PHOTO BY FRAZER HARRISON/GETTY FOR IMAGE.NET

Proud hubbie Orlando Bloom watches his wife, model Miranda Kerr, walk the runway at Dior.
PHOTO BY KEYSTONE PRESS
NOW OPEN IN YOUR PURSE.

The World’s Smallest Box Office™
Showtimes. Trailers. Tickets with no service fees.* Download our App or go to m.cineplex.com

*Standard data rates may apply.

™© Cineplex Entertainment LP or used under license.
CASTING CALL

MARA DEALS WITH BITTER PILL

Rooney Mara replaces Blake Lively in director Steven Soderbergh’s Bitter Pill. In her first leading role since The Girl With the Dragon Tattoo, Mara will play a depressed woman on trial for murdering her just-out-of-prison husband (Channing Tatum) while on medication. Jude Law plays the doctor who prescribed the dodgy pills. Shooting begins next month for a Spring 2013 release.

KURYLENKO MEETS CRUISE

Jessica Chastain can’t star in every movie. When the busy Chastain dropped out of Tom Cruise’s untitled sci-fi flick (it was being called Oblivion), Ukrainian-born Olga Kurylenko (Quantum of Solace) stepped in. The plot revolves around a soldier (Cruise) banished to a decimated Earth who finds a crashed pod containing a beautiful woman. Tron director Joseph Kosinski will helm the pic that starts shooting shortly and arrives in theatres next summer.

WHAT’S GOING ON WITH... 24

It’s been almost two years since TV’s 24 turned off the clock, but star Kiefer Sutherland was adamant there’d be a big-screen version of the show about his hot-tempered, counter-terrorist agent Jack Bauer, and he was right. After finally settling on a script, 24 starts shooting in April or May. Five directors are in the hunt to helm the action-packed story covering a 24-hour period in Bauer’s frenetic life.

BRAND SCARES UP WORK

Russell Brand is in New Orleans trying to get his suddenly lacklustre career back on track. He’s shooting writer Diablo Cody’s (Juno) untitled directorial debut about a woman (Julianne Hough) who reassesses her life after surviving a plane crash. He and The Help’s Octavia Spencer play people who guide Hough in her journey. Brand follows that with a starring role in producer Michael Bay’s Hauntpreneur, in which he’ll play a man who arranges visits to haunted houses.
ALSO IN THE WORKS

- Look for Kristen Wiig as the girl Ben Stiller desires in The Secret Life of Walter Mitty.
- Vera Farmiga will play Fleetwood Mac’s Christine McVie in the Dennis Wilson bio-pic, The Drummer.
- Timeless casts Liam Hemsworth as a man who builds a time machine so he can see his late wife one last time.
- Paul Giamatti stars as Friar Laurence opposite Hailee Steinfeld’s Juliet and Douglas Booth’s Romeo in Romeo and Juliet.

HIDDLESTON JOINS VAMPIRE PIC

Tom Hiddleston (Loki in both Thor and The Avengers) has signed onto director Jim Jarmusch’s vampire pic Only Lovers Left Alive. He joins cast mates Mia Wasikowska, John Hurt and Tilda Swinton in this love story that involves two bloodsuckers. The vampire thing has been done to death, but the involvement of quirky Jarmusch, and a curious cast, has us intrigued.

FRESH FACE MATT MILNE

A complete unknown, Matt Milne got his big break when Steven Spielberg cast him as Albert’s best friend, Andrew, in War Horse. The 21-year-old drama studies student needed permission from his university to skip school and finish filming War Horse, but getting notes to miss class is a thing of the past for Milne as his career heats up. You can catch the ginger-haired actor in this month’s Wrath of the Titans as warrior Agathon.

KRUGER’S HOSTING DUTIES

The Host has found its villain in Diane Kruger. Currently shooting in Louisiana with Andrew Niccol (In Time) behind the camera, The Host is the adaptation of author Stephenie Meyer’s (Twilight) sci-fi tale of a woman (Saoirse Ronan) battling an alien parasite that wants to take over her body. Kruger will play The Seeker, a mean alien parasite that oversees the attempted takeover. The Host hits theatres March 29, 2013.
It’s the kids’ movie that parents didn’t want their kids to see. Willy Wonka & the Chocolate Factory (based on the book by Roald Dahl) was a box-office dud when it was released in 1971. Perhaps it was the idea of a group of children being tormented while touring the factory of a strange, verging-on-mad confectionary genius (Gene Wilder, pictured above with the film’s Oompa-Loompas) that kept families away.

But when Willy Wonka started to air on TV and was released on home video in the 1980s, viewers began to appreciate its surreal splendour, and its message that finding a golden ticket to enter candy heaven could also lead to sugary hell for children who were naughty. —IR

Willy Wonka & the Chocolate Factory screens as part of Cineplex’s Classic Film Series on March 14th and 25th. Go to Cineplex.com/events for times and locations.
March’s
BEST DVD
AND BLU-RAY

THE DESCENDANTS
MARCH 13
Hawaiian lawyer, land baron and father of two Matt King (George Clooney) is devastated when his wife is critically injured in a boating accident. But as she lies dying in a hospital bed, Matt’s oldest daughter (Shailene Woodley) tells him that mom was cheating, and his feelings become much more complicated.

MY WEEK WITH MARILYN
MARCH 6
The true story of wannabe filmmaker Colin Clark (Eddie Redmayne) who spends a week with Marilyn Monroe (Michelle Williams) as she films 1957’s The Prince and the Showgirl. Williams earned raves, and many awards, for her performance.

MADAME LAZHAR
MARCH 13
Canada’s great hope at this year’s Oscars was this French-language film directed by Philippe Falardeau and starring Mohamed Fellag as an Algerian immigrant who takes over an elementary school class after their previous teacher dies suddenly.

THE MUPPETS
MARCH 20
Hipster nostalgia junkies were stoked about Jason Segel’s take on their beloved Muppets before this movie came out, and even more so after they’d seen it. Segel plays Gary, a human who reunites the Muppets and helps them put on a show to save their old theatre.

CASABLANCA
70th ANNIVERSARY EDITION
MARCH 27
This limited-edition, numbered gift set comes with a reproduction of the original 1942 French film poster, a collectible coaster set and two new feature-length documentaries, Casablanca: An Unlikely Classic and Michael Curtiz: The Greatest Director You’ve Never Heard Of.

Mass Effect 3
MARCH 6
PS3, XBOX 360, PC
The hugely popular role-playing trilogy finally concludes. In the first game the Reapers were hinted at. In the second game we tried to stop them from reaching us. Now, they are here.

Why We Love...

Games

Buy DVD and Blu-ray online at Cineplex.com
Finally...

5 BEST

WILL FERRELL COSTUMES

Ranking our favourite Will Ferrell costumes is like, well, choosing our favourite child. We love them all. Where Helen Mirren may be Queen of the Costume Dramas, Ferrell is surely King of the Costume Comedies. But choose, we must. So as Ferrell’s latest costume comedy — the spoof of Mexican melodramas Casa de mi Padre — hits theatres we rank Will Ferrell’s five best on-screen ensembles. —MW

THE NEXT LEVEL OF CINEMA

A NEW GENERATION OF THEATRE HAS ARRIVED.

Giant Wall-To-Wall Screen • Crystal Clear Digital Projection
Immersive Surround Sound • Large Rocker Seats • Reserved Seating

CINEPLEX
ESCAPE WITH US®

For a location near you visit cineplex.com/UltraAVX
Starting March 9th, play Fashion & Flicks to win daily prizes and a grand prize of a $2500 Winners gift card and free movies for a year from SCENE! Scan here or visit facebook.com/winners daily to win!

On Her:
- Striped Blazer $24.99 compare at $40
- White Jeans $29.99 compare at $60
- Cross Body Bag $12.99 compare at $20

On Him:
- Hoodie $29.99 compare at $55
- Jeans $39.99 compare at $98
- Fedora $16.99 compare at $35

Size: 8 x 10.5"
Agency: Alex Gosse Design
PubName: Cineplex Ad
Insertion: March Issue